Semi-marathon in Chicago to collect funds for rural development in Morocco

Washington, Sept. 20 - Moroccan NGOs will organize on Sunday a marathon in Chicago to collect funds that will contribute to rural development in Morocco, notably in the high Atlas region.

"The marathon is an opportunity for Moroccans and Americans to bring assistance to needy populations in rural zones in Morocco," said organizers.

The marathon was initiated by the High-Atlas Foundation (HAF) as a contribution to the National Initiative for Human Development (INDH), that was launched last May by king Mohammed VI to fight poverty and social exclusion.

HAF is an American non-lucrative organization set up by former peace corps in Morocco who use their past experiences and professional knowledge in the north African country to promote development projects in the rural world in partnership with the Moroccan government and NGOs.

The foundation has already carried out other projects in the north African country.
